Fil-Am names torturers

At hearing, Roxas mentions 'RC,' 'Dex,' 'Rose,' 'James,' 'Boss'

By Nikko Ditao

THE FILIPINO-AMERICAN ACTIVIST WHO returned from the United States to back her claim of having been abducted and tortured by state agents named her tormentors at a public hearing conducted yesterday by the Commission on Human Rights (CHRH).

The four hours marked by a couple of short breaks, Melissa Roxas, 31, detailed a six-day ordeal in May, mentioning "RC," "Dex," "Rose," "James," and a man whom they referred to anonymously as "Boss" or "Ka."

Roxas, a member of the US chapter of the militant Bayan Alangin Mabuhay (Bayan-USA) and of the law firm-based cultural group Hala-Ara, consistently took long pauses before answering a question, as if gathering courage. At times her voice cracked, or trailed off.

But she said with certainty that she would be able to tag

Roxas if they met again.

She said that while she was identified for the most part of her captivity, she had managed to "shoot the blindfold" by peering through the cloth and was thus able to not the profiles of Roxas and RC.

CHRH Chair Lito de Lima told reporters after the hearing that the commission would conduct a closed-door session with Roxas today for the purpose of clarifying up sketches of the potential torturers.

GSIS chief cleared of graft over Luna's 'Parisian Life'

By Donna Puzosillo and

THE COURT OF APPEALS (CA) has cleared Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) president Winston Garcia and nine other officials of probable graft for the purchase of three Paris-Luxembourg and Peraldo Amadoro paintings for P1.5 million, which the Commission on Anti-Graft found to be excessive.

The appellate court's Fourth Division upheld the Commission's finding in favor of the GSIS, and denied the appeal filed by former GSIS lawyers Albert Velasco and Maria Molina and Ferdinand Gallo, president of the government employees' group Guep.

The justices said the commission had failed to present convincing arguments. "The very short discussion offered by the petitioners... obviously and definitely lacks specificity to warrant the reversal of the Commission's ruling," said the court's decision presiding

IT'S ALL "HALLUCINATION."

Administrative setbacks came down hard yesterday on former Defense Secretary Arroyo to Cruz for saying that President planned to remain in power beyond the end of her term next year and for saying soldiers to disobey unlawful orders.

Interior Secretary Peraldo Pano said he was wondering what Cruz had experienced as Mr. Arroyo's defense secretary that he was now having "nightmares."

"He is now working for a presidential candidate. He should confine his comments to politics and stop talking about things he knows are really not true," Pano told reporters at Camp Crame.

9 YEARS OF GMA: A REVIEW

'Mixed' record: A few hits here, a few misses there

By Cayetano Paderanga Jr.

THE MACROECONOMIC record of the Arroyo administration was probably its best described as "mixed." A few hits here, a few misses there.

The following article must be taken as a summary that one hopes could serve as a synopsis for the next administration.

The best claim the administration could make for the last eight years would be the faster growth of output than gross domestic product.

From a widespread sense of average of 2.45 percent in the 1990s, the growth rate has increased to an average of 4.28 percent.

There are issues about the actual level of this growth—where it came from and how much government policies were responsible for its emergence.

Nevertheless, the general impression over the past few years is still that the Philippines is now on a higher growth track.

A systematic search for the causes of this higher growth rate reveals the critical importance of the renaissance of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

Examining the sectors that grew and considering the absence of all complementary growth in some of the most likely sources of growth like investment and exports led to the conclusion that the growth over the past decade has primarily been service-oriented.

Looking further for the source of this consumption-led growth, the answer lies in the massive influx of remittances from OFWs. Originally set for 2006, its attainment had to be moved to 2010—and even that, under current circumstances, is a pipe in the sky.

The passage of the expanded VAT ("reformed VAT" or RFAV) law in 2005 has often been mentioned by some po-

Employment record: Good, bad and ugly

By Tomas Africa

PRESIDENT MANCAGALAN Arroyo has not been kinder in pointing to employment as one of the state's major issues, along with poverty, health and education, in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) since 2001.

However, the Arroyo administration's record on employment has been mixed—with a few "good" grades, some "bad" ones and some "ugly" marks.

The target of one million additional jobs has been met several times since 2006. The job increases in January (13.3 million) and April 2007 (1 million) could be due to the company activities for the general elections in May that year.

From July 2006 to April 2009 there was evidence from the Labor Force Survey that an

Budget unbalanced, injustice in tax policy

By Carlos E. Mabilin

RIGHTLY OR WRONG, SOME quarters see mismanagement of government finances as one bright spot in the current administration's economic record.

As it reflects on top priority balancing the budget was the top item in President Maningo Arroyo's 34-point agenda that she proclaimed early in her administration. It was the

"It is the agenda's 'HEAT THE ODDS' moment."

A balanced budget, however, proved to be a moving target. Originally set for 2006, its attainment had to be moved to 2010—and even that, under current circumstances, is a pipe in the sky.

RP not doing enough vs AIDS, says UN

THE UN DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMME (UNDP) yesterday said the Philippines has not done enough to curb the rise of HIV infections in the country.

Using official government records, UNDP country director Stewart Meyer said that about 80 percent of reported HIV transmissions were due to unprotected sex. "All the main ingredients for an epidemic are present in the country," Meyer told a conference in Iloilo.

Official government records show that there were 85 new HIV cases by the month of May which is a 743 percent increase on the number of cases posted in the same period last year.

From January to May, there were 322 infections with one leading to full-blown AIDS and one death, the National Epidemiology Center said.

along Center said.

Most of those who contracted HIV were males in their 20s who had some sex relationships and mostly from highly educated urban sexual unions.

He said the government appears likely to halt down its spending on HIV medications. The development level of testing and treating the spread of HIV by 2015.

The government was not doing well "because instead of preventing and halting it, we are increasing cases," Meyer said. AFP

New metering plan to cut cost of phone calls

By Mike Morales

THE NATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS Commission (NTC) has directed cellular phone companies to lower the pulse metering rate from 60 seconds to 5 seconds.

The pulse metering rate is the length of time cellular service is charged for.

Currently, telecommunications companies charge users around 70 per pulse, which amounts to 90 seconds. This is known as a one-minute charge.

In a memorandum signed yesterday, the commission ordered the rate adjusted to 10 percent of value it currently is.

Commissioner Noel Canlas said this is important for call charges to the benefit of cell phone users.

"This will be a big help to them because it will further bring down call rates," Canlas told the Inquirer in an interview.

NTC has been given four months to implement the new rates because the commission has to make some changes to their system, Canlas said.

"[The stakeholders] agreed four months is sufficient for the transition," the commissioner said.

The public can expect the revised rates to be made full effect by year's end, he added.

Canlas said he could not yet say by how much call charges would go down.

The carrier, he said, must make plans to submit in 30 days their proposed rates based on a 6-second per pulse charge.

The order also gives the firms another 30 days to amend their "interim" or "proposed" rates to meet their "interim" or "proposed" rates of billing.

The new rate, however, does not phase out the per-minute charging scheme. Subscribers can still choose to be charged by the minute or opt for unlimited service at a flat rate, the commissioner said.

International calls are not covered by the regulation, it said.

GMA reappoints poll commissioner

By TJ Santiago

PRESENTER MANABALABAYO has reappointed as the GMA Commission Polls Group with less than 10 months to go before the May 2010 elections.

"If you recall this was held in Iloilo, so the President already gave the go-ahead to release it," Executive Secretary Eduardo Fronda said in a regular briefing.

Though, former Marikina City president took his oath as the 10th Commission Polls Group in early March this year, he has yet to be confirmed by the Commission on Appointments.

Though not engaged when Congress adjourned on June 5, he is considered a sitting member of the Commission at large, meaning he has no functional powers. To regain his ministerial status, he has to be reappointed by Malacañang, Canlas said.

Congress is expected to return in November. Appointed on July 12 this year, Canlas is supposed to serve until February 2013.

He has been linked to Virginia Canlas, the election commissioner at the start of the July 2007 "Halls Gate" interlocking scandal, but has consistently denied this. The scandal was set off by the discovery that his daughter called Canlas to rig the results of the 2004 presidential run in favor for

PHILIPPINE MACHINE-READABLE PASSPORT: World-Class Consular Service

PROVIDING WORLD-CLASS MACHINE-READABLE PASSPORTS

MESSAGE

Congratulations to the Department of Foreign Affairs for its milestone year – 111th Birthday Anniversary – and as you continue to provide excellent consular services to the Filipino Diaspora.

I commend Secretary Alvarez to his role in the continuing commitment to implementing comprehensive foreign policy. Under his leadership, the institutions and mechanisms of the officers and staff of the DFA, the DFA and together with its constituent agencies, have set and achieved very demanding targets, policies and higher standards of public service.

In 2017, after receiving decades-old directives, the DFA introduced the globally compliant and highly secure Machine Readable Passport (MRP) – made from scratch by the provision of printed data, which allows Filipino travelers and citizens abroad to enjoy faster and smoother processing in foreign countries around the world. Moreover, the introduction of the MRP has enhanced the credibility of the Philippine travel documents and improved the national business for tourists.

Indeed, the MRP is a milestone travel document and the Filipino people at last in fact and name mainstreamed and secure in this world.

Hon. Secretary, DFA
President, Philippine Airlines

- ✓ Over three million machine-readable passports (MRPs) issued since June 2017
- ✓ Quick swiping allows immigration clearance in seconds, an improvement from the old manual recording of personal data
- ✓ Fullproof MRPs enable fail-safe detection by immigration authorities of attempted fraud
- ✓ Enhanced credibility of the Philippine travel documents
- ✓ Compliance with ICAO standards fulfilled by the Philippines two years ahead of the 2010 deadline
- ✓ At the same time as the old green passport (P3000)

North America, Europe, Asia and the Middle East, processing time from application to issuance is 7 to 14 working days in the Home Office

- Only 40 minutes to file passport applications
- DFA appointment system serves 10,000 online and walk-in clients per week
- DFA Consular Information Centre (550-0000) processes 4,000 calls per week

Pass a Joint Resolution calling for A Constitutional Convention, and the Election of Delegates in Conjunction with the May 2010 Elections

We, the sovereign peoples of Mindanao, call on the Senate of the Philippines and the House of Representatives to immediately pass a joint resolution calling for a constitutional convention in 2010:

Whereas, there is a pervasive sense of hopelessness and despair among the peoples of the Land of Promise arising from the unceasing armed conflict, poverty, internal displacement and political instability which perpetuate the culture of violence and intimidation;

Whereas, the situation calls for structural changes and reforms which can be made possible only through the amendment of the 1987 Constitution, as has been proposed nationwide by the Citizens' Movement for a Federal Philippines (CMFP);

Whereas, the peoples of Mindanao have traditionally viewed proposed amendments to the constitution with apathy, and even suspicion, believing them to be a Trojan horse for the perpetuation of political dynasties and their vested interests;

Whereas, the Lumad, the Bangsa Moro and Christians can realize their just desire for self-determination, for liberation from fear and want, for political stability, and autonomy through a Federal Constitution, which requires changes in the present charter;

Now, therefore, in consideration of the foregoing, we, the sovereign peoples of Mindanao, now call on the Senate and the House of Representatives to pass a joint resolution calling for the holding of a constitutional convention in 2010 and for the election of delegates in the national elections scheduled for May 11, 2010;

Resolved further, to let copies of this resolution be provided to the President of the Philippines, the Senate, and the House of Representatives.

serene Philippines.
Aquino visited the Pope's message through a letter that was delivered early of morning to Aquino at Manila Medical Center for Hematology de Villa, the former Philippine ambassador to the Vatican.
"She smiled, she smiled her head," de Villa said the because in a telephone interview. "She is her husband, the former President created an army of security."
de Villa said the Pope had known about the condition of Aquino, who's well-known as a "widowed widow and daughter" of the Church.
"She gave everything for her country and her husband," she mentioned during the funeral of the late president. "She was a widow and daughter of the Church."
"She never wanted to become president, but she accepted it to give democracy back to us," de Villa added.

Holy Father's message
Basil Archbishop Adams in his letter to Aquino: "Cardinal Bernardini has confirmed that the Pope is spiritually close to your Excellency in your suffering."
"The Holy Father has asked that you be informed that he is remembering you in his prayers. At the same time, he invited upon you the blessing of Almighty God: Father, Son and Holy Spirit, in prayer of healing and comfort."
Adams also said Aquino was being held by the former President.
"Your Excellency, I would also like to promise you the continuing prayers of the worldwide and of the community of the Aquino Foundation. May we be strong for you," he said in his letter.
Aquino's "a big smile" after the Pope's message was read, according to de Villa.
"It's Cardinal Bernardini that asked her if she wanted a flower said at her bedside, and she said yes," de Villa said.

The Mass was attended by Aquino's daughter Trudy, who is living a number of grandchildren, and the bishop and more attending to her.
Pain management
The former President's condition has not improved since she was taken to the hospital last month for weakness and loss of appetite. She was diagnosed with colon cancer early in the year.
It is now in pain, according to her nephew Wilfredo Lopez.
"After (the doctors said) trying to do it manage her pain to the doctor's office," Lopez said. "Aquino said: 'I'm not going to the hospital. I'm staying here.'"
Lopez said his aunt was being taken to the hospital in Manila City Hall.

Doctor probed over Jackson's death

LOS ANGELES—INVESTIGATORS LOOKING INTO the death of pop star Michael Jackson have seized new information to analyze if they believe their focus is what could become a criminal investigation.

About one month after the filing of Pop Star Jackson and his wife's son, Michael Jackson, called the Heisterkamp of Grand Malibu, the personal physician Jackson was in Los Angeles to see Jackson as a suspect for a series of criminal charges in London.

Among the latest news is the report from an office head doctor and 21 statements. Murray's lawyer, Robert Stewart, said yesterday before the evidence "counted" evidence of the office of the physician. "It did not provide further details, and police said they do not consider Murray a suspect."

Authorities are investigating several doctors who associated with Jackson to see if they were properly probed.

The doctor who had been named about 10 times before Jackson's death and their suspect had been investigated by the police. The doctor was a potential suspect, possibly the drug was found in the Beverly Hills mansion Jackson was living, according to a police report. Knowledge of the investigation also is not believed to be a public.

Michael's role of Murray's child in a lower-income state of South Dakota was not seen until after the death of Murray in a court case in the investigation.

On June 25, Murray told Jackson was in a bed room of Jackson's mansion, which he had been told to come to see him and his family. Jackson was in the room, but Jackson was not in the room.

Police have been reviewed Jackson, including the Los Angeles hospital where Jackson was taken and pronounced dead. The doctor's office was

Asean rejects Clinton's call to expel Burma

CLINTON

BANBAR—THE ASSOCIATION of Southeast Asian Nations will not consider expelling Burma (Myanmar) over the demands of professional human rights groups, including US, Thai, British and others.

US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said that information from the region's human rights groups is not enough to justify a decision to expel Burma from the organization.

But that Prime Minister

Wong, speaking to a group of 100 people, said that the ASEAN member states should not consider expelling Burma from the organization.

"There are not enough grounds to do that," he said.

In May, imports recovered from record fall

Value of shipments up 18.9% month-on-month to $3.6B

By Russell W. Domingo

MERCHANDISE IMPORTS IN MAY REBOUNDED from a record fall in April, with total value of inbound shipments rising to its highest level since October.

May imports reached $3.617 billion, 18.9 percent higher than the $3.040 billion in April.

But on a year-on-year basis, imports still fell by 24.2 percent, continuing a downward trend that started in October 2008.

In April, imports plunged a record 37.4 percent year-on-year. May's figures brought the import bill to the five first months in $16.257 billion—32.9 percent lower than the $24.347 billion shipped in the same period last year.

Economists said the latest data provided evidence that the export-led recovery is still in its infancy, as the domestic economy was on the mend.

Song Song Nino, a regional economist at GMA-8K in Iloilo, said, "The longer working days in May, compared with April, and higher oil prices contributed to the rebound."

According to the National Statistics Office, two-way trade of goods dropped by 33.7 percent to $9,072 billion in the five months to May from $13,738 billion a year ago.

In May alone, trade trade fell by 28.2 percent to $4,764 billion from $6,667 in

By Marlene E. Bano

MOODY'S INVESTMENT SERVICES has upgraded the country's credit rating to a notch, reflecting confidence in the outlook of the Philippine economy.

This is the first time in 12 years that the country received a credit rating upgrade from Moody's, which the Philippines found to be the most difficult to please among credit-rating agencies.

Tom Burns, senior vice president of Moody's, particularly said in a statement that the Philippines' financial crisis remained strong despite the crisis, which had constrained the economies of most advanced countries.

He also cited the Philippines' level of liquidity, as measured by its foreign currency reserves, which had reached a historic high of $39.6 billion. In that area, he said, the Philippines fared well, while the reserves of other

Back in the upgrade, the Phillips plant, along with Moody's second- and third-grade members, lost investment grade. Previously, the rating stood at BB- for member/active investment grade.

Moody's assigned a "watch" outlook on the Phillips.

SMC (State Education Council on Art) said this alternative was for the "most conservative" in system who have a different risk profile.

Credit ratings are a closely watched indicator, as investors normally consider them to be a leading indicator of the health of a country or to buy bonds being sold by its government.

Moody's, like most major credit rating firms, keeps the Philippines below investment grade because the proportion of the government's debt to the country's gross domestic product remains high.

When branding goes way beyond marketing

Building brands is more strategic, long-term in nature

Price war challenge

URING A RECENT BUSINESS forum where the Asian Retailer was a special guest, data on the wisdom of price wars were shared.

In response to these questions on when to launch a price war, we were told that a retailer was more than a year ago that defense on the price war.

• It's a highly competitive industry. The board was told that the market was so competitive that a price war was not a price war but a price war.

Many believe that when one does marketing, one does branding, too. This is not always the case.

Many businesses often practice marketing by identifying target markets, creating new products and keeping old ones.

By identifying new customers and markets, some businesses invest in and are successful in marketing communications, but they often overlook branding when they create a new product, service or brand.

MINN. POLY TECH PRIVATE SERVICES (MPS) gives the information it needs to monitor the Department of Agriculture (DA) budget in real time.

But that, the DA has never had a $402.2-million annual budget. This amount is approximately 2.4 times more than its FY08 budget and 60 percent more than its FY09 budget last year. Then it, until last July 3.

On that day thanks to the support of Agriculture Secretary Arthur Dan and Undersecretary Nicholas Gonzalez, the following par-

Brazilian models—they're not as glam as we think

By John Ramirez
Contributor

THE BRAZILIANS HAVE invaded Manila. From Akhila Sen's huge billboard for a clothing company on EDSA to another Brazilian male model endorsing the competition, these good-looking human specimens have replaced popular Filipino celebrities as hawkeyes of mass-market goods.

This ain't "it" yet, Gavin Bushden, a Brazilian. She's the face of women's underwear brands like Titi, Stratos, Under a Ghetto Dress and Miss Finesse, and is worth $330 million, according to Forbes Magazine. Bushden made $45 million last year alone. She's been named the "Hottest woman in Hollywood" and once dated Leonardo DiCaprio before eventually marrying one quarterback, Tom Brady.

Her counterparts in the Philippines may want to live plain lives, but many of them have said they left their country to escape poverty and find greater prosperity. Some, who is of Brazilian/Japanese descent, admitted that he grew up in humble surroundings and never truly modeling until he was spotted by talent scouts in Manila.

Most of them speak only Portuguese, Brazil's national language, and are not conversant in other tongues. Some do not even speak English well.

Low talent fees

They live in cramped studio units in the high rises of Sakedo or Legaspi Village, sometimes four people sharing a 15-sq-m space. They split among themselves the rent that ranges from P20,000-P30,000. They go out all day doing errands, and "go out" in jocks, even crossing Aquia Street to post and set before being taken again.

They accept talent fees as low as P10,000 per day of work just to make each other, and sometimes, even get credit from her magazine shoots, just to keep up their modeling portfolios. They spend the night putting in credit to increase their visibility and for those photos that would hopefully land them in the dailies. They are big country of their country's beauticians, or at least of their styling privileges in some high-end establishments. Once, I was surprised to be with a bunch of these Brazilian gods and goddesses a room-busy found for them. They were Brazilian models looking for a work's stop in the party capital during Holy Week. They ordered the 10-hour travel just to do Bushden's recent photos and live like a politician's dream of enjoying the French Riviera or Capri Islands by way of Bilibyan Sea and Tabaco Beach.

And who would ever forget the last time these poor models had to endure during a 2008 Indian election when immigration agents raided the lockers of GMA-7's, arriving every Canadian-looking model who allegedly didn't have work papers?

While these models may have taken jobs away from local models, some the government agency deal with the matter was dismissed and downgraded matter.

Fortunately, some Brazilians have found unexpected success in the Philippines. Beauty queen Patricia Martinez decided to stay and make Manila her second home after winning Miss Earth. Joana Marston is now a mistress of a wealthy man and a thing very well as a model.

Male model Adriano Panfili is now the chef of Nino-Chester after logging some kitchen time as a consultant in the brand's Manila restaurant chain.

Different taste

However, another female Brazilian is enjoying a different kind of fame with those infamous pin videos. She is perhaps still unaware of the video since she had left for Europe before it became a sensation.

Once are the days when we had to "tip it" foreign models. Many are practically in our dreams these days. When I was with an agency, we often had to check the eyes of foreign models, paying international rates and putting them in first-class accommodations.

Brazilian they were totally unaware of. We usually send the French-Vietnamese for their delicate features—Asian hair structure, aquiline nose, colored eyes and dark hair. Think Zhang Ziyi in "Memento of a Goddess."

It's clear that, for now, Brazilian models are here to stay, even if some of them would come close to even a tenth of the money their counterparts, Bushden, earn. How long will this last? Who knows, let's just sit back and enjoy the parade of publicists.

1. Introduction

Changing the landscape of New Manila: PineCrest.

When you think of Baguio you imagine rows of pine trees, fresh breeze, and cool climate. You think crisp, clean air. You think it's good for the kids and the grandparents. You imagine a healthy environment including one free from noise pollution buffered by towering trees.

Now, take a deep breath and visualize all that - in Manila - and you get PineCrest.

Developer Crown Asia has created the most unique offering in domestic pine trees, hundreds of them.

Pines are among the most commercially important of tree species, valued for their timber and wood pulp throughout the world. In temperate and tropical regions, they are fast growing softwoods that will grow in relatively damp stands, their acidic drooping needles inhibiting the spreading of competing hardwoods.

"We actually imported the trees from Australia and created a nursery in Santa Rosa, so we could popularize the development with Pine trees," says Ding Sarmiento, President of Vista Land & Lifescapes, Inc. "What people are surprised that they can grow in our climate," he adds. "PineCrest will live up to its name."

Populated spring will soon be upon New Manila at PineCrest, the business development that sits on almost 8,000 square meters of prime land, is connected right inside the LRT 2 station.

"We will populate the development with Pine trees — PineCrest will live up to its name."

CROWN ASIA
A VISTA LAND COMPANY

PINE IN THE CITY

Welcome home to PineCrest.

Located at the corner of the famous Alvaro Drive and Aurora Boulevard, PineCrest is the newest landmark by developers by Crown Asia - its first towers sit on 8,000 square meters of prime land right inside the LRT 2 station in the heart of Quezon City.

PineCrest offers more than just the dense living. It features a unique ambience that's refreshing. Endless rows of pine trees that act as greenies, complementing architecture inspired by the serenity and charm of European urban settings.

Urban living has never been this frequent. And when you're far from the bright lights of business centers, commercial districts - with educational and medical facilities nearby - you just can't get enough of it all.

Gentler alternative to shaving

DEFLATORY PRODUCTIONS have joined the war on the razor for good, offering a new way to shave. It is important to read instructions and follow thoroughly.

Safety reminders

When trying out new products that go directly on skin, make sure to do a patch test first. This means testing the product on a small area and checking for allergic reactions, before applying all over.

Shave hair within 72 hours of shaving to a trim, especially for sensitive skin.

Also, avoid direct sun exposure, but mix other methods for hair removal, after a few days to between sessions.

If you are tired of the rough results of shaving and you are days—or even weeks—away from a wedding appointment, try a depilatory cream.

It's a good depilatory cream to use as a temporary compromise, but it's not the beauty ideal for most women to make the most out of that technology. Finding the right makeup artist for your wedding day

AS I LOOK AT THE COURTS OF THE world's supermodels, I can't help but be amazed by how talented our local makeup artists are.

They do such a good job of bringing out the beauty of their subjects while still making them recognizable. That's not easy.

With all these makeup magazines around, it's a little hard to get married and see these artists. I have had dear friends who are newly engaged. Girls normally know which designer to go to, but are at a loss when it comes to makeup artists. That is very understandable. Have others here you actually need the services of one? Probably not.

On very special occasions such as your own wedding, having the right makeup is a real asset. Going from one local makeup to another can add up to a big amount, so it's worth it.

A good tip is to ask your friends to show you their photos on their big day. They choose two you like best.

Also, why not let your friends with one eye by attending an event on the day of your trial makeup? This only if you get your money's worth, you can also get your loved ones' opinions on how you look.

To give your makeup artist an idea of what you want, bring a picture of your preferred look. Just have realistic expectations, you can't end up looking like Angelina Jolie—if you don't look like her, to begin with.

When you meet your makeup artist, make sure you are comfortable with her or him as you can explain what you really want and your response time.

Knockout!

As if she or he will say after the church ceremony to re-touch your makeup, and how many people she or he will have along to the reception.

Makeup artists work hard. It is a fun job that can also be boring. They spend long hours standing up, and there will be time to relax.

Here are some of the best local makeup artists and their work. Apologies for my mistake but when I got into a picture of Angelina Jolie that was shot by her.

For that for another (mistake). Also, go to know her beauty pick-me-up after a long day of work.

"BEFORE a wedding, I make sure I make time to look in a mirror with Amazing Grace's hairbrush. Then I apply a new look to my hair."

Do you love like you shop?

Your shopping habits can reveal a lot about your romantic life

By Pam Paster

ONE NIGHT IN THIS CITY, WITH BOTTLES of cold beer in hand, the theory hits me harder than 18 shots of tequila. People shop like they love.

Back to shopping and romantic history lived before my eyes. I saw two subjects #1.

I shop with wild abandon. When I really like something, I will buy it in all-out fits—which is probably how I ended up with over a hundred pairs of flip-flops. There's one such thing as too many. Glad to see my computer and spending money on things making their own changes in a strange city, getting angry shopping bags made on my arm and blurring as my feet, transitioning from flip-flops to sneakers as I could remember an online order in Tokyo to bring my purchases to my hotel, waiting for a bus from Hongkong and buying my fingers around that greedy customer with state wouldn't cut my fingers back were surely—these are just among the things I've done for shopping.

How far have I gone for love? Into the city.

When I like something, I like it in the privacy of my room. I can't see I haven't been like some may with people, too. I've made impulse purchases I ended up regretting, and I've jumped into relationships I ended up regretting, too. I have shopped, evidently—and, yes, I have loved recklessly.

I've just thought that when it comes to love, the no-returns exchange policy does not apply. For all purchases are final.

Careful shopper

Monday is not subject #2. She is a careful shopper. One who will wait until a sale, find something she likes, read the fine print, pick it up and even try it on, but she will always hesitate to buy it. More of the class, she waits until without buying anything.

She just doesn't want to risk—whether it's shopping or love.

She goes out on a date (which, naturally, is "trying people out") but she usually ends up making a commitment.

But when she finally decides on something, whether it's the last one she's seen on a brand new relationship, she's done 100 percent, ready for the long haul. Person is not subject #3.

She used to mean around objects of desire as examples—the MacBook Pro—and she'd be like, "I remember, when I was about to buy my MacBook, I kept hugging on to the Apple site. I couldn't even work. I just kept reading stuff about it. It was the same thing with the chef. I kept looking him up online, trying to get to know him more. I'd do that even in the office."

In shopping and love, he can be persistent.

When I like something, I will keep going back to the store until I have enough money to buy it. I've been the same way with the chef. I keep going back to him because I keep thinking that I'll find it hard to find someone like him again.

Really, while he was able to get his hands on the MacBook Pro, his strategy to ring the chef have been futile.

Expensive taste

Person doesn't know it but she's not subject #4.

She has expensive taste—clothes, bags, shoes and more. Brands and labels are a big thing for her, and similarly, the more she likes, the more she likes to look good on paper.

Never mind that she's made a fool of herself looking so expensive but caught high heels, never mind that she's made a fool of herself cheating on...

PROMOTING QUALITY EDUCATIONAL ENTERTAINMENT AT SM MALL OF ASIA

SM Mall of Asia is undoubtedly the country's premier destination mall with endless choices on shopping, entertainment, and dining. The mall also has splash facilities and amenities that you can't find anywhere else—as well as attractions and events that promote educational entertainment for children of all ages.

NATIONAL CHILDREN'S BOOK DAY AT MOA

Last July 21, National Children's Book Day 2009 was held at the SM Mall of Asia. Sponsored by the Department of Education, National Book Development Board, the Philippine Board on Books for Young People, Vibal Publishing, and the Bay Series of the Philippines, this five-day activity hopefully inspired the kids to read age-appropriate books to further develop their young minds. In this modern age of video games and computers, reading has become a forgotten virtue, but a habit that the National Children's Book Day wants to re-ignite.

Storytelling sessions led by Thamar Dizon Smith, and kids were enthralled with exciting stories about the Earth and the Universe we live in. Kuya Mikee, being the animated storyteller that he is, provided a very entertaining time for the kids as they listened through the stories using their imaginations. There were lots of games with generous prizes provided by the SM Hypermarket.

SM MOA CARES

The children supported by SM Foundation were treated to a very special day of learning and fun. They played with colorful mascot guests and went to visit the Nido Fertilized Science Discovery Center, where they had a great time exploring the mysteries of science. Krissy Kome gave the kids a free snack and a tour of their kitchen to see how their delectable treats are made.

SOLAR ECLIPSE VIEWING AT ASTROCAMP OBSERVATORY

July 22 is an important day to the astronomical community as the longest total solar eclipse of the 21st century happened last Wednesday. Astrocamp Observatory at MOA's Sun Miguel by the Bay is at the center of the action as astronomers and other science enthusiasts flocked to this one-of-a-kind in-mall observatory. Telescopes fitted with special filters allowed visitors to view the solar eclipse. Though only 49.7% visible in the Philippines, the viewers experienced a once-in-a-lifetime event that will only happen again on year 2173. Many thanks to the efforts of Dr. Armando Lee and Mr. Bernabe Espasola who made the event possible.

Children are bound to have a very exciting day of fun and learning at the country's only mall by the ocean, Manila Bay. Bring them over with the whole family for a guaranteed good time at the mall that has it all for you. No other mall comes close to SM MOA!

party, closing the deal is your wedding. I prefer clothes that make me feel confident. Like your wedding day, it's the day the demand is on you. I'm choosing to wear the dress that comes to this one. A good reminder: dress in these moments, painted with pearls and sky-high pumps (which is my standard 2009).

When meeting a client for the first time, I'd like to wear something that leaves a proper impression. I bring white shoes and pants that I'll wear later. I like to give a good first impression. I like to wear a good first impression. I like to wear a good first impression.

CV: I'm always in demand because they're easy to wear and easy to transform from day to night. So when I close a deal, it's probably not to wear a new dress. It's a neutral base with my high heels, of course, and a bag that makes a statement. I always graduate toward clean, simple, but featuring accessories in basic colors like black, white, beige and red.

I guess when I'm at work, I try not to look too confident or take my clients too seriously because they are often things to worry about. You should always look put-together and professional.

knows one who wears and more convincing that they're not. No matter of whether they are buying a small house or a house, no apartment, they really want to see what they're buying. They want to make sure they get the most out of their investment.

Some tips on buying real estate? What are the best things to look at first?

OK. It's not always go to a developer with a good record, find out all the facts in advance. And you can't really make your business and lifestyle.

The best advice would always be from the real estate. It's to talk to them or not. They would tell you if they are happy with their purchase. Check out the location.

When closing a deal means the beginning of a long working relationship. I'd probably need my client at our office in Lakewood, from so that they can see the house and where we work. They should be comfortable with us.

CV: Most estate is still a good for big investment so you should really see all the options available to you before you decide.

When buying a house, first and foremost you should determine how much you can afford to invest. Finding the perfect place is really quite relative because different people have different needs.

Some people are looking for more space while others, location is very important. They go to be sure about schools. Other considerations include the community and its location.

It is also very important to look at the developer's reputation and track record. You should be certain they are reliable when they have promised. They also should be in good place and the specifications you're signed up for because you might get surprised when the house that's turned over to you is not the house that you are in the model unit.

In your line of business, how do customers react to this occasion? What is best in the market at the moment? (Cheap, mid, and premium or low end?)
OK. We cater most to middle and economical housing. I refuse to sell a low-end house because it's often mistaken for low quality and that is never the case. Our clients are always making sure we make houses we'd be proud to live in.

At the moment, it mostly affected the customer confidence in our international sales where they feel more of the recession.

Especially after the recession, don't really affect our sales directly. In fact, our launch was biggest knowledge, Xerox launch with 4,000 houses, during the height of the recession and managed to sell everything in four months. Because of this, we believe in more delivery. They just will find the money they need.

CV: In this land, the holding company of Condo Homes, Condo Asia and Condo... are very lucky that we have such a diverse range of products that cater to every segment, from affordable, mid-income to high-end and we are not as affected by the recession.

There has always been a steady demand for houses. What I did notice, however, is that the Bomb threat adds drama to Butler-Heigl film junket

KATHERINE Heigl, star of 'The Ugly Truth'

LOS ANGELES—WHEN A bomb threat can do to mess up Hollywood's carefully structured universe.

So there we were last Tuesday afternoon at the First Nations Hotel, waiting for our interview with Gerard Butler and Katherine Heigl, who star in "The Ugly Truth," to begin. We were drinking coffee to pass the time because we'd already had quite a day. We drove from a hotel in Santa Monica to downtown Los Angeles' downtown hotel. And then, to our surprise, Adam Karlin, Scott Rogers and Lester Kline, who are an amazing morning and noon of guests today with these special films, especially Heigl, who can talk the best of them, with his impressive, seemingly innocent face and that common character laughter. We were thinking, how can Gerard and Katherine top from last night's interview, thanks to no thanks to someone who called that there was a bomb threat to the hotel. Apparently, the call didn't specify which hotel in the 90000 area apparently has a ticking bomb. Only the First Nations Hotel, which ironically is not really located in Beverly Hills but is in Los Angeles' downtown. He is still preparing them to the hills as "Beverly Hills Adjacent," took the bomb threat seriously. It made them concerned as "emergency situation" on the 18 and asked everyone to be careful to remain the premises. Within seconds, hundreds of film in studios, studios and the hotel's where very close sleepers were trading about the emergency status and asking us to be in the room.

Police quickly contacted off the scene around First Nations. A paramedic truck with flashing red lights was parked in the middle of the street as police swept the hotel for explosive devices.

But like LA style, word was that hotel staff suddenly appeared in front of us and offered us a hot butter—stale coffee, of course. A male hotel guest who only had time to put on the First Nations where he had and sleep immediately took this scene while watching his first Nations newspaper.

Robert Labadie, who directs "The Ugly Truth," told us later "I thought it was interesting that I had the entire movie scene, AC Milan, running with me down the stairs. That's an experience I never had." It was a moment shared by many women, including me with Heigl.

Only IN HOLLYWOOD
Robert T. Labadie

On the street, we felt like kids getting a reprieve from classes approach himself on the gate to get some rest. It was a miracle that the night after did not cause the trouble.

Another reporter lay in the shade, headphones on, and asked the moment to make an episode of "Last" on his laptop.

"My outfit!" exclaimed a chef in white tunic, stood and again as he worked about the club he was looking when the staff and guests were ordered to evacuate the hotel.

Indeed, looking inside with a north-pick on his mouth today he was looking at the hotel, which was a stick of wood lodged in his mouth, which he said the situation reminded him of his school days, when some guest had pulled the fire alarm. He could have at least returned by a bomb explosion without warning staff, or there could be a real bomb today in the hotel's basement or better yet, but not here on the street, not like the hotel getting a reprieve from classes or in this case, the interview in the same old room.

Gerard appeared to be relieved not to be talking about himself before or perhaps. The hotel's owner placed, where people were living today by everyone, asked Gerard if they could have photos with him. The scene changed. Then he was led into the 18 Club entrance where he was just across the traffic to land.

These Filipinos, flying from the East Coast, told us they had just checked in when they heard the order to evacuate. Having seen in other pictures, one of them asked, "Beverly Hills?"

As we're all treated this valuable lesson in life—the movie people do not—this hotel also had to finish. He never asked to return the scene and never 18 Club. In a small room, a table with chairs were brought to meet with, we were back in business. These made

'Only' 99 days of life

ONE OF THE TV SHOWS we watch quite regularly is the "Today" show, and each evening the daily program is full of information, entertaining features, "must-see" tips and light-hearted, humorous touches.

Once in a rare while, however, the "Today" show comes up with a feature that lifts viewers when they live and breathe, and the program becomes more than just a TV production. It provides viewers with a shared experience that reminds them of the really important and valuable realities of life and

View

One such success, while unexpected, was shared by viewers last month when the show featured the heartwarming story of a young couple whose infant son lived for only 98 days.

Now, infant deaths aren't a war as they should be—but when it comes to this particular story, usually involving the heartbreaking report that the baby's parents haven't been able to prove their bond of lovingly supply or give up all hope, they decided to address each new day that the child needs operation.

half-empty or half-full, the parents in this instance were so grateful for their child's life, how

Most of us would have a hard time seeing life and death in the deeply faith-filled way that we do here, say that many flowers instinctively "understand" the young person's readiness to depart and gently guide outside and welcome.

Yes, that beloved child who before his 100th day is gone...and you, his all too late life had been rendered by pain and despair. On the other hand, the ladies must have felt secure, snugly housed and relaxed, and we can surmise that he died happy.

It's unusual and dramatic. It happens like this that flowers can have a lot from. We may never experience a situation as this one unfolded as this, but it is an all-time high up to value the people we love.

FROM THE DIRECTOR OF
'THE NOTEBOOK'

AND BASED ON THE
BEST-SELLING NOVEL
BY JODI PICOULT

cameron diaz
my sister's keeper

After a bad fall, one sister thought she would be left alone forever... and her unexpected surviving husband, meanwhile, just came to find her older sister, Kate, can somehow fight the leukemia that has plagued her since childhood... the product of inappropriate genetic diagnosis, Anna was conceived as a spare marrow match for Kate... a life and a role that she has never questioned... until now.
